PAPILLON'S WINE LIST

If we are defined by what we eat, the same holds true for what we drink. While we increasingly focus on the heritages of our food, we often oversee the source of our beverages. At PAPILLON, the heart of our mission is to propose you flavourful, intricate, and exciting wines, spirits, liquors, beers, teas, coffees and any drink you can imagine, all sourced from the most dedicated, responsible producers.

Beyond certifications and labels, we seek to build genuine relationships with the farmers we partner with—because, ultimately, our producers are farmers first. We aim to support a vision of farming that respects the future, safeguarding biodiversity, respecting natural cycles, and embracing sustainable agriculture free from synthetic chemicals, on a scale that remains human. This enables our producers to craft wines, brews, and distillates that are rich in complexity, with minimal additives, offering a true reflection of place, time, and culture in every glass or cup. Our commitment to these principles makes us not just responsible consumers but active participants in preserving the planet and us, but similarly great for the palate!

Our team is willing to share these stories and raise a glass with you.

ORGANIC

Organic wines are crafted using methods that exclude synthetic inputs like chemical fertilizers and pesticides, and they do not contain genetically modified organisms. These wines are processed with minimal use of approved additives, with small amounts of added sulfites generally permitted. Different countries have their own guidelines and regulations, set by their respective food standards agencies, that determine if a wine can carry an organic certification.

BIODYNAMIC

Biodynamic viticulture is a holistic form of organic farming that traces its roots to the teachings of Rudolf Steiner in 1920s Europe. It views the vineyard as part of a broader ecosystem, emphasizing the balance between soil, plants, and animals in a self-sustaining, living system. Unique practices in biodynamic farming include the use of fermented herbal and mineral preparations in compost, as well as an astronomical calendar for planting and harvesting. Additives are kept to a minimum, and only small amounts of sulfites are typically allowed. Biodynamic products are often certified by independent agencies, many of which are affiliated with Demeter International.

NATURAL

Natural wine lacks an official definition or certification. In essence, it is simply fermented grape juice with no added ingredients. While the taste difference between organic or biodynamic wines and their conventional counterparts might be subtle, natural wines tend to stand out distinctive in both nose and palate.
